Class History

It is late afternoon of a spring day in the year 1990. A gray-haired old lady of sixty sits on a green lawn in her favorite chair. Her small granddaughter sits by her side and listens to the tales of long ago.

"Tell me the one about when you went to school, Grandmother!"

"Well, it's nearly time for you to go to bed, so I'll just tell you about my last four years."

Eagerly the child listens while the Grandmother retells the story she has cherished these many years.

"As the school bell rang on the morning of September 5, 1941, a jolly group of Freshmen tramped into their places. There were twenty-four of us who enrolled--Lester Alexander, Bobby Asquith, Billy Cleveland, Tony Conaway, James Dixon, Freddie Epp, James Gilmer, James Moore, Martin Smith, David Weedon, Avis Adair, Shirley Asquith, Annie Mae Bell, Loretta Daniels, Ernestine Edwards, Ruth Hewston, Lorene Meredith, Mary Louise Robins, Nelda Singleton, Alarea Turner, Lady Kent West, Katie Merle Miller, Thelma West, and Geraldine Henderson.

"We felt that we had at last grown up and knew practically everything there was to know. We soon found that this was not the case. Our junior high school days had been only play compared with the work we were to do that year.

"The next year we were sophomores and very proud of our step up the ladder. We regretted losing five of our class mates. Lorene Meredith and Loretta Daniels were claimed by matrimony. Annie Mae Bell and Katie Merle Miller transferred to other schools, while David Weedon quit school, joining the Navy some time later. The sadness of their leaving was somewhat lessened, however, by the re-entrance of Glenwood Pitts; whom most of us had known in grammar school days. Glenwood was always known as a ladies' man, and he still lived up to his title.

"In the fall of 1944 we became Juniors. We welcomed to our class this year Von Moring. The annual Junior-Senior Banquet was a gala affair--a Mother Goose party with dancing afterward. We called it "jooking" back in those days. Your old grandmother will never forget the good time she had that night.

"In the fall of 1944 we started back to school as Seniors. At this time the war was at its height, so there were only fourteen of us. Martin Smith and Von Moring were no longer among our ranks, but we were proud of them because they were in Uncle Sam's army. We also regretted the loss of James Dixon, who enrolled at Marion Institute in order to finish school a semester earlier. Cupid's dart was again busy. Soon after school began, Nelda Singleton left us to make her home in Alexandria, Virginia, with her husband, Lt. Alexander. The senior play, "No Foolin'", and a barbecue by the junior class were highlights of the year."

"Well, tell me about graduation, Grandmother. Were you glad when you finished?"

"Yes, daughter, I was glad; but it's a sad memory. We all hated to leave that dear old school."

"We'll save that for tomorrow night, Grandmother," whispers the child as she sees the tears in the old woman's eyes. "I'm sleepy anyway."

Class Prophecy

Work had not been as heavy as usual. I sat idly thumbing the chart of new patients--Smith, Owens, Collins, Conaway--no, it couldn't be! Yes, there it was Tony Conaway, Room 237. Ummmm, tonsils! A wave of nostalgia swept over me. Orrville High School in 1945! Could it be our Tony? Well, this is no way to find out about it. Perhaps the patient in 237 needs ice water; at any rate, I'll get the opportunity of finding out just what this Tony Conaway looks like!

As I wandered into the room, I noticed that the patient was very short. He had his head turned from me, but as I spoke he turned. It was Tony. After he recovered from his surprise at seeing me, he tried to speak but his voice was almost inaudible. I leaned closer while he explained that his tonsils had been recently removed and talking was painful.

"Tell me about them," he whispered.

"Now you just be perfectly quiet and I'll tell you all I know. Of course, that is not very much. I'll be fired though if I allow you to talk. As I was looking over the newspaper some time ago, I noticed that six models were coming here from New York for a clothing display at one of the large stores. And though I wear a uniform most of the time, there is nothing I like better than pretty clothes. After the evening and street clothes had been shown, a cute little girl in a two-piece bathing suit came on the stage. I was just looking her over--lovely legs, nice figure, a very becoming hair-do. And then I noticed her smile. Something about that smile seemed very familiar. Yes, you guessed it. It was Thelma West. After the show, I went in to talk with her. She told me that once in a while she sees Ernestine when she goes to California. You know Tine is now married to the manager of Douglas Aircraft Plant out there. She was his private secretary at first, but not for long. He decided she fit better in his home than in his office!

"Thelma also told me that she had heard that Jimmy Gilmer now owns a Chemical plant in Washington. I always knew that Jimmy would succeed; he always seemed so ambitious in high school. And by the way, Jimmy isn't married yet--a good catch for some girl! He doesn't seem to have time for girls in his busy life.

"I soon left Thelma because she was going to put on a late show. When I got home, I was listening to the radio. Television is certainly an addition to the radio's attraction. I turned from station to station, and an announcer caught my attention. His voice seemed very familiar, so I quickly turned back. My guess was right. It was none other than Glenwood Pitts. Gennie certainly makes a good announcer, and with television that smile of his is worth a million.

"You knew Bobby Asquith was the famous member of our class, I'm sure. You remember how brilliant Bobby's mind was in high school days. He was always trying to invent something. He had a hand in perfecting this television. I really don't know enough about it to explain exactly what he did.

"Thelma didn't seem to know where the others had wandered to. But I told her about an experience I had had several weeks before. I was riding through town, and suddenly a large sign attracted my attention. It read, "Epp's Studio," in a neon sign. Out of curiosity I walked in, and just as I expected, Freddie owned the place. While I was posing for a picture, I noticed a picture on a nearby table. Upon inquiry I learned it was his wife. Just what Freddie had always wanted in high school--a beautiful brunette!

"Just as I was leaving town, I noticed a friend across the street. Being anxious to talk to her, I was not noticing where I was going. I made a dash for the other side of the street. Suddenly a speeding truck knew me down and everything went black. I wasn't seriously injured, but I had to stay in bed a few days. When I got up, I carried the case to court. You could perhaps guess my lawyer's name. Hall Chambers! He was always good at arguing, so I felt safe, of course. He won my case by saying I had a perfect right to run across the street to catch a friend whom I might not see again soon. Hall could always prove a point. I even got some money from the case.

"After the trial was over, I talked with Hall some time. He told me that James Moore owned a large farm near Marion Junction. Of course, you knew he married Betty Harwell! As I passed their home some time ago, I noticed that they had something more than a picket fence running around the house--a cute little red-headed boy. James, Jr., I suppose.

"Just yesterday as I looked through my mail, I noticed a letter from Mrs. Bobbie Mitchell. I could not imagine who that was; but when I opened it, it was signed "Geraldine." I remembered Bobbie Mitchell as the soldier who had a flame in his heart for her while we were in high school. I breathed a sigh of relief, because Gerry kept him waiting so long! She mentioned that she had seen Shirley. And, Tony, can you believe it? Shirley is still single! After all those men! But Geraldine says she is wearing a beautiful diamond now and the date is set for her wedding next month--and to a millionaire! You never can tell about Shirley!

"In a footnote, Geraldine mentioned a new show that I must be sure to see when it comes to town. Lady Kent West (the plump girl we went to school with) is playing the leading role. She has reduced and has a very slim figure. With her lovely blonde hair she bears a close resemblance to Veronica Lake.

"Oh yes! I didn't tell you that Glenwood and Thelma were married. I was sure you heard about the wedding when Glenwood got his commission about two years after we were graduated. Thelma said she saw Alarea not so very long ago, but Alarea was in such a hurry she hardly had time to speak. She had to run home and let little Johnny take his nap. It was nearly time to start supper if she was to have it when John got home from work.

"Well, I've told you about all our classmates now. I must run along! Hope you will be feeling better soon."

"What about yourself?" interrupted Tony. "Are you married now?"

"No," I replied, "but I have him selected. He's a captain in the regular army. I want you to meet him some time. I'll run back later and hear about you."

About that time a trim blonde burst through the door and ran excitedly to the bedside. "Oh, Tony, that last song you wrote! The man just came to tell you he had a five thousand dollar offer for it!" I slipped quietly from the room to let them share the happy news alone.

Football

After two weeks' practice in uniform the Blue Torrents began to look like a fair ball team. They were not so polished, but all had a fighting spirit. The first game of the season was at Marion. As the boys struggled through the game, they tried to remember how everything should be done, how Mr. Childres had taught them. The game was lost 13-0, but unfortunately for the opponents the remainder of the year, the boys learned much. During the next week Mr. Childres taught them a new play. It proved to be a good one. The next game was with Greensboro. Using this new play as a secret weapon, the Torrents made a touchdown on the first play of the game. M. C. came up from nowhere to catch a pass and make that first touchdown. Those Greensboro boys were really dumbfounded. The final score was 13-7. The team from Dixon Mills the following week looked so large that the determination of the Torrents was fired. M. C.'s statement, "The bigger they are, the harder they fall," proved prophetic. He was right. Orrville won by a score of 37-0.

Carlowville was unable to play the next week as scheduled. That gave the team two weeks of practice for the Camden game. Camden's scorching aerial attack kept the boys busy, but their ground attack was not so hard. Johnnie Meredith intercepted a pass and ran 95 yards for a touchdown. That was really a thrill. The final score was 14-6 in favor of Orrville.

On the following Friday night the team went to Linden for a night game. It was a "nightmare." The only bright spot in the game came when Johnnie Meredith again intercepted a pass for a spectacular run of sixty yards. Linden won 31-6. Defeat made the team fighting mad, however. Thomaston came up for a crushing defeat the next week, 51-0. Patterson made so many touchdowns that the team became overconfident. Hence, when the return game was played on Thomaston's field, the Torrents suffered a 13-6 defeat. The boys were ashamed to return to school the next Monday. But the humiliation was good for them. They were determined to redeem themselves by winning the remainder of the games. Consequently, Camden was defeated on its own field the following week in spite of that team's desire for revenge. The final score was 14-7 in favor of the Torrents.

The next game with Thomaston was the final game of the season, and for many of the boys the last they would ever play. With this in mind the team gave Thomaston a humiliating defeat and tasted revenge in the form of an 18-0 victory.

This completed one of the most successful seasons of any Orrville High team. Members of the team appreciate the tireless efforts put forth by Mr. Childres, who proved a splendid coach. The following boys made the first team; Eugene Pegues and M. C. Patterson, ends; Raymond West and Red Moore, tackles; Kent Lauderback and Tony Conaway, guards; Alex Singleton, center; Desmond Bridges and Johnnie Meredith, halfbacks; Bobby Mayton, fullback; and Freddie Epp, quarterback. Pat Knight, Will Moore, Don Mooney, John Ross Long, Hall Chambers, Sammy Lewis, Dean Wilson, Glova Bridges, Aaron Andrews, Harry Miller, and Randolph Jeter made up the second team.

Patterson, Randolph Jeter, Bobby Mayton, Harry Miller, Alex Singleton, Eugene Pegues, Dean Wilson, John Ross Long, Clyde Hicks, Thomas Parrott, Aubrey Rush, Edgar Meredith, Roy West, Raymond West, R. The team has played five games--two with Plantersville, and one each with Linden, Carlowville, and Suttle. Orrville was victorious in four of these. Nine games remain to be played.

On March 23 Wilson was on the mound for the first game of the season. Plantersville was unable to get a hit. The score was 12 to 0 in Orrville's favor. On the 27th we travelled to Plantersville for a return game. Meredith, who was on the mound, pitched a good game but the team did not support him as they should. The result was a 4 to 2 victory for Plantersville.

On March 29 Orrville played Carlowville with Mayton on the mound. He gave up only two hits and won the game by a score of 4 to 0. The next day Linden came to Orrville. Wilson was on the mound for his second game. He pitched a good game winning 8 to 3.
